N.5.

The streets of London are better paved and better lighted than those of any metropolis in Europe: there are lamps on both sides of every street, in the mean proportion of one lamp to three doors. The effect produced by these double rows of lights in many streets is remarkably pleasing: of this Oxford-street and especially Bond-street, afford striking examples. We have a few street robberies, and rarely indeed a midnight assassination. This last circumstance is owing to the benevolent spirit of the people for whatever crimes the lowest orders of society are tempted to commit, those of a sanguinary nature are less frequent here than in any other country. Yet it is singular, where the police are so ably regulated, that the watchmen, our guardians of the night, are generally old decrepit men, who have scarcely strength to use the alarum which is their signal of distress in cases of emergency. It does credit, however, to the morals of the people, and to the national spirit, and evinces that the brave are always benevolent, when we reflect that during a period when almost all kingdoms exhibited the horrors or massacre and the outrages of anarchy, when blood had contaminated the standard of liberty, and defaced the long established laws of nations, while it overwhelmed the freedom it pretended to establish, this island maintained the throne of reason, erected on the firm basis of genius, valour, and philanthropy.

ANNEX1
REQUIREMENT

N.8

Water Cresses are sold in small bunches, one penny each, or three bunches for twopence. The crier of Water Cresses frequently travels seven or eight miles before the hour of breakfast to gather them fresh; but there is a generally a pretty good supply of them in Covent-garden market, brought, along with other vegetables, from the gardens adjacent to the Metropolis, where they are planted and cultivated like other garden stuff. They are, however, from this circumstance, very inferior from those that grow in the natural state in a running brook, wanting that pungency of taste which makes them very wholesome; and a weed very dissimilar in quality is often imposed upon an unsuspecting purchaser.

Hot spiced gingerbread, sold in oblong flat cakes of one halfpenny each, very well made, well baked, and kept extremely hot, is a very pleasing regale to the pedestrians of London in cold and gloomy evenings.
